2019 Call for Proposals: Water and Food Projects in India

J-WAFS is offering a total of $30,000 in grants to current members of the MIT community interested in addressing a water or food challenge in India. The grants are intended to further work being pursued by individuals as part of their MIT research, innovation & entrepreneurship, coursework, or related activities. Support for teams will also be considered, though at least 50% of the team must be from MIT. Applicants may request up to $15,000 in funding. J-WAFS will award two to three grants based on the winning proposal(s).

Proposals should be for development projects or projects benefiting low-income populations. Examples of relevant challenges could include but are not limited to the following:

- Economically appropriate water purification technologies, esp. for rural areas
- Water distribution and management strategies, esp. for rural areas
- Other water quality issues, e.g. sanitation, monitoring, etc.
- Food safety issues
- Food preservation and waste reduction
- Water for agriculture, especially smallholder farms
- Agricultural innovations and improvements

Eligibility

Faculty members, full-time research staff, currently matriculated MIT graduate and undergraduate students, or small teams with at least 50% MIT participation and an eligible individual in the leadership role will be considered for funding. Grants can be used over the course of one year to support travel, technology pilots, scale-up studies, community outreach and education, etc. Funds may not be used for MIT equipment purchases. Awards will be announced in the spring of 2019, and the work supported by the grant should commence during the summer of 2019 or the 2019-2020 academic year..

Application Process

Eligible applicants should submit a proposal, following the attached guidelines, to Andi Sutton, J-WAFS communications and program manager. Please email the proposal to arsutton@mit.edu.

Deadline

Proposals and any accompanying materials are due by 5 pm on Monday, March 18th, 2019.

Selection Criteria

Grants will be awarded based on: (1) importance of problem and appropriateness of proposed activity to address problem; (2) evidence of the applicants' commitment to the chosen problem/activity; (3) likelihood of successful outcomes; and (4) necessity of receiving this funding in order to achieve these outcomes.

For more information contact Andi Sutton, communications and program manager, at arsutton@mit.edu and (617) 715-4222.
